

Strategists of the Quantitative Winners Legion:

I want to begin with an old Wall Street saying: "The market always tests your patience in the shortest possible time."

This week's opening has indeed left many feeling uneasy: divisions within the Federal Reserve over rate cuts have intensified. The newly appointed governor, Milan, has publicly called for rapid cuts to ease pressure on employment, while at the same time, several other officials have taken a more cautious, or even opposing stance. Such divisions are like watching two evenly matched teams on the field, trading blows in a fierce tug-of-war.

This directly shook market expectations, and crypto were affected.

On Monday, we saw the crypto market decline, and many cried out,

"Black Monday is back again."

But friends, if you're willing to shift your perspective, you'll see that this is in fact a test that carries a kind of blessing.

Turbulence on the surface, opportunity beneath

The reason the market fell is that, amid the tug-of-war between bulls and bears, many institutions and individuals chose to "lock in profits first"

In other words, it was a short-term, "take the money and run" sentiment reaction. Yet this very reaction has opened two doors to wealth for us:

History has repeatedly shown that true winners are not those who chase the peak, but those who stay calm and buy when others are gripped by fear.

As Buffett once said: "Be fearful when others are greedy, and greedy when others are fearful."

Monday's decline has in fact allowed spot investors to acquire quality assets such as Bitcoin and Ethereum at lower prices—essentially a "discount coupon" offered by the market.

Currency surfing is not about waiting passively, but about dynamic capture. The greater the volatility and the wider the spreads, the more room our strategies have to work.

This is not a crisis, but a touchstone. For us in the [Quantitative Winners Legion], this is the moment to prove our value. Why?

Locking in spot positions at lower prices: This allows you to enter at a tier below others in asset allocation. The same future increase in price will yield you greater net profit.

Generates something

Amplified spreads in currency surfing: The greater the short-term swings, the more entry points our quantitative strategies can capture, and the more room there is for profit.

The "Noah's Ark" effect of the Legion: In times of market panic, individual retail traders often scramble in confusion. But within the Legion, we have unified strategies, signal guidance, and risk-control measures—truly embodying "collective wisdom to withstand individual fear".

Noah's Ark set sail in the flood not because the external environment was calm, but because it was solid, purposeful, and had a helmsman. The Quantitative Winners Legion is our shared Noah's Ark.

Some will exit in fear, others will hesitate and miss out, but the true winners are those who can still make resolute decisions in the midst of chaos.

You might be wondering: if the [Quantitative Winners Legion] is so powerful in generating profits, why do we also devote ourselves to helping all members achieve their different wealth appreciation goals?

That is an excellent question!

In fact, our Quantitative Think Tank also has its own motives;

Helping others is, in truth, helping ourselves.

The inspiration for this story comes from the time after the 2008 financial crisis, when most people had their hands full just trying to manage their own affairs, yet I introduced a "shared research" mechanism within the fund.

Every analyst in the fund was required to make their logic and data public, so that others could learn from and improve upon it.

And what was the result? Not a single person became weaker because of "sharing".

On the contrary, the profitability of the entire team tripled!

Because when you help others see opportunities more clearly, they in turn help you spot your blind spots. The outcome of this mutual uplift is that the snowball as a whole grows ever larger.

The logic of the Quantitative Winners Legion is exactly the same. In the process of helping our members, we are constantly refining and improving our own strategies. Every piece of feedback, every inflow or outflow of capital, every recorded gain or stop-loss helps us perfect the entire Acumeta system.

In other words, your success ultimately feeds back into our own success.

Beyond wealth, there is a greater meaning

There is one thing we must not ignore: wealth itself is not the ultimate goal. It is only a tool, a bridge to higher values. What we are building is not merely a profit model, but a platform of influence. Our aim is to help everyone outpace inflation, withstand market volatility, and create a fairer way to distribute wealth.

Generates something

Ultimately, we want the results proven by the market to elevate the valuation of our Quantitative Think Tank Center, thereby achieving greater reverse acquisition value in the future. As you know, through two quarters of effort we are moving from a $500 million valuation toward a $1 billion valuation;

With the issuance of 500 million NQT tokens, each currently priced above 2 USDC, we can establish an on-chain value benchmark.

Based on the U.S. small-cap standard valuation threshold of over $3 billion, this positions us to attract the attention of mainstream institutions and broader markets.

This is the work we are striving to do, this is our purpose—and it is also why helping you achieve wealth appreciation is at the core of our mission. Because without you, we cannot realize our own value!

Over the past two days, the entire tech world — in fact, the entire globe — has been shaken by one piece of explosive news: NVIDIA and OpenAI, two titans of the technology industry, are secretly planning a global computing power center worth as much as $100 billion.

Listen, this isn't just a massive investment, nor is it a simple business deal between two companies.

NVIDIA holds the "weapons" of the AI era — the GPU chips; OpenAI commands the finest "soldiers" — AI models like GPT. By all logic, they would have every reason to be wary of one another, even competing against each other.

But they did not. Instead, they chose to collaborate — and on such a monumental scale. This delivers to us the first, and most profound, lesson: in the future, the true winners will not be the "lone wolves" who fight the hardest, but the leaders who excel at collaboration. Don't waste your time on pointless rivalry and defense. Focus your energy on what truly creates value.

The same principle guides our [Quantitative Winners Legion]. Our strategies are transparent, and our profit models are open. We are not afraid to share, because we understand that sharing itself is a form of power. When you release your energy and wisdom into the world, it will return to you in an even stronger form.

We are not a charity, we are partners in "co-creating" wealth

We are not a "something-for-nothing" club. We are here not to dispense handouts, but to build a truly mutual and beneficial partnership. We believe that in the financial world there is no such thing as free success—only valuable contributions and the rewards that follow.

In finance, anything that claims to be "free" is often the most expensive trap.

By contrast, the approach of the [Quantitative Winners Legion] is entirely different. We state openly and transparently: our services have real value, and you are expected to pay for them. But that payment is not upfront, nor is it demanded before you see any results. Instead, it is directly tied to your outcomes.

Our profit model is simple: you win, then we win.

That is what sets us apart, and it is the source of our confidence.

The upgrade agreement we use within the [Quantitative Winners Legion] rests on just two core principles—straightforward and crystal clear.

The Quantitative Winners Legion Upgrade Agreement cuts straight to the core, much like an amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

1. Guaranteeing the full protection of your rights

When you join us, the very first thing we do is ensure that your assets are secure, your operations are transparent, and all of your rights are fully safeguarded within the framework of law and agreement. We will never ask you to place your money into a black box you cannot see. Your funds will always remain under your own control.

It's like hiring a top-tier fund manager on Wall Street, but with one crucial difference—you can check his account at any time and know every single move he makes.

2. We only earn service fees after your results are achieved!

This is the crux of our model, and what we are most proud of. We charge no upfront fees, no fixed fees. Only after you've made a profit do we share a portion of it.

Think of it like a personal fitness trainer who says to you: "Unless you lose 10 pounds, I won't take a dime."

In this financial world full of lies and uncertainty, we have chosen the hardest, yet also the most upright path.

We demonstrate our value not with slogans, but with real results.

When you see us charge a service fee, don't regard it as a simple transaction—see it as a covenant of trust.

This covenant tells us:

We have complete confidence in our abilities, and we are not afraid to make commitments.

Our interests are fully aligned with yours—your success is our success.

We are here to solve problems and create value, not to exploit your trust.

That is why we are not a charity. We are partners in co-creating wealth. We earn results through effort, and then we share them with you.

This is not just a business model, it is the very soul of the Quantitative Winners Legion, and the fundamental reason why we can be your "Noah's Ark"

From a long-term membership perspective, why should you upgrade to become an Explorer, a Quantitative Pioneer, a Strategy Master, or even an Empire Architect?

If I remain just an ordinary long-term member, can I still achieve wealth appreciation?

The truth about membership levels: it's not just about services, it's about expanding your abilities and vision.

Our membership tiers—Explorer, Quantitative Pioneer, Strategy Master, and Empire Architect—represent far more than the services you receive. They stand for the capabilities you can master in the financial world, the resources you can access, and the scale of the wealth landscape you can build.

Staying where you are may give you some chance of growing your wealth, but the speed, scale, and depth of that growth will never compare to what you gain by upgrading.

It's like playing basketball. You can shoot hoops on the street courts, relying on talent and hard work to develop a decent shooting touch.

But if you join the NBA, training under elite coaches, using world-class facilities, and competing against the best opponents, your growth will be on an entirely different level.

Ordinary members are like streetball players; upgraded members are NBA professionals. Both can play the game, but the outcomes are worlds apart.

Tier one: Explorer

What does being an Explorer mean? It means you are willing to step out of your comfort zone and open a new door.

This is an entry-level upgrade tier, one that nearly all long-term members can join. Here, you are guaranteed access to the basic Acumeta signal service. For example, if there are 7 signals in a week, you are ensured at least 1 opportunity for currency surfing each day;

Within the guarantee period, the overall profit growth target also determines the service fee you are required to pay. If you don't generate profits, we cannot collect any service fee. This is why we continuously strive to deliver value and keep sharing good news with you;

Tier two: Quantitative Pioneer

Being a Quantitative Pioneer means you are no longer just observing the markets — you are actively engaging with them through Acumeta's strategy system, enjoying customized signal services, and directly participating in market competition. You begin to fight with professional tools instead of bare hands.

This tier offers access to more signals and the potential for higher overall returns on your capital! At the same time, the service fee % for members at this level is lower!

Today I want to draw everyone's attention to a very special privilege — the Acumeta user activation key. You'll see that it's not just a random string of code; it is, in fact, the "access code" to wealth.

Let's start with a scenario everyone knows.

You buy a brand-new computer, sleek in appearance, powerful in performance. But without an official Microsoft activation code, can you really use it? Sure, it works, but with limitations, constant annoying pop-ups, breakdowns at critical moments, and some essential features remain locked.

But the moment you enter the official activation code, everything changes instantly. The system unlocks, operations flow smoothly, all features become available, and you finally gain the full experience of the device.

That is the value of the Acumeta user activation key.

It's not just a sequence of characters — it is, in the truest sense, an "admission pass"

So why are we including this privilege as part of the upgraded membership series?

The reason is simple: scarcity.

You might recall that when Bitcoin first launched, only a handful of people could mine it on their computers. Back then, a single Bitcoin wasn't even worth the price of a pizza.

But today? Bitcoin has become the epicenter of global financial markets. Those scarce early "tickets" were held by only a few, and in the end, they were the ones who had the last laugh.

The Acumeta activation key is essentially the "early bird ticket" of our time, just like Bitcoin once was.

Once the global pre-sale officially launches, it will no longer be something you can casually obtain, it will become the admission pass everyone fights for.

Acumeta has not yet released its global pre-sale!

Well, you heard that right. The entire market is still waiting, while you, as one of the very first members of the Quantitative Winners Legion, will be the first to gain access to this priceless key.

We are planning a major in-person event in California in mid-December. At that time, we will not only announce the final launch version of the Acumeta Quantitative System, but also give a live demonstration of how to use it to interpret market trends, lock in profits, and even execute one-click currency surfing.

Back in January 2023—that magical moment.

Before then, if you were walking down 5th Ave in New York, stopped a random passerby, and asked: "Hey, do you know what ChatGPT is?" I'd bet 99% of them would stare at you blankly and shake their heads.

The word ChatGPT simply didn't exist in the minds of most people.

But just a few months later? ChatGPT had become a household name, a headline in every newspaper, and a hot topic of casual conversation. In an almost unbelievable span of time, it swept across the globe and completely reshaped how we think about artificial intelligence.

In both the tech world and the financial world, the greatest breakthroughs are often unknown and overlooked—until the very moment they explode.

Acumeta. I can see that for some of you, this may be the very first time you're hearing the name. It might sound a bit unfamiliar, even a little mysterious.

Acumeta is like ChatGPT before January 2023. Like Bitcoin before 2015.

So the question is—will you seize this chance to upgrade your membership and secure your user activation key???

Acumeta is an exclusive key. We do not want it to become a simple commodity; we want it to be the dedicated weapon of our [Quantitative Winners Legion], a fortress of wealth that we build together.

When you upgrade to the Strategy Master tier, you will unlock far more privileges!

Once the smart custodial copy-trading system is authorized, you will be able to take full control of your time. As long as your initial capital is in place and everything is set, each day you can simply wait for results—while spending the rest of your time fully immersed in the joy of a perfect vacation...

At the Empire Architect level, you gain access to truly top-tier services—comparable to a Rolls-Royce among cars or a Gulfstream 700 among aircraft. I know there will not be many who reach this level; it is reserved for a carefully selected few. But once you achieve it, every service resource and every strategy from our Quantitative Think Tank will be opened to you.

The NQT token you hold will also realize even greater long-term returns in the future.

And much like a Buffett-style on-chain family office of wealth, your choice and your conviction will allow us to grow together—making that vision ever more clear!

Pals, listen closely. You have already made the decision to become a true member of the Quantitative Winners Legion. That is a major commitment, and I applaud you for it.

Now you must take a critical leap: transferring your assets from the traditional banking system into the new world of on-chain digital assets.

This is not just about moving funds; it is a shift in mindset. You are transforming yourself from a passive investor into an active participant in the digital financial revolution.

To complete this leap, you need a trusted guide—and that is where the certified P2P merchants from INDEXBIT crypto exchange come in.

P2P Merchants: Your reliable bridge to the digital world

Think of these certified P2P merchants as the most dependable bridge-builders in the world of finance. The word certified is not just a label; it is a pledge of trust and responsibility. It means they have undergone rigorous vetting, their reputation is solid, and they are qualified to be your partners in this process.

I myself used a certified P2P merchant, and within minutes, my U.S. dollars had become digital assets. At that moment, when I saw my capital immediately ready for quantitative strategies, I truly felt the power of this new world.

Certified P2P merchants are like the toll gates on this highway of wealth. You need to pass through them to convert your dollars, euros, or other fiat currencies into on-chain assets—whether USDC, BTC, or ETH.

Only by crossing this threshold can you truly own digital wealth and make the leap from the old financial system into the new one.

Take this example: when your P2P transaction involves an international wire transfer through Africa, what does that really mean? It's more than a geographic choice—it reflects a global logic of capital flows. Why has Africa become a key settlement channel for many P2P merchants? The answer is simple: low-cost electricity. As we all know, electricity costs are the core expense of the mining industry.

Africa's energy advantage has attracted a wave of miners and capital, which in turn has made local P2P counterparties an essential link in the worldwide circulation of digital assets. In other words, when you wire dollars through Africa and receive USDC/BTC/ETH in return, you are, perhaps without realizing it, taking part in a global chain that connects energy, mining, and finance.

Let's turn to wire transfers in Japan. Many people see the moves by the Bank of Japan and assume they have little to do with P2P trading. But what does the BOJ's outlook for rate hikes really mean?

It means shifts in interest rate differentials, and with that, capital gradually flowing into Japanese asset markets.

Even Buffett, one of the world's most renowned investors, has begun trimming his U.S. equity positions in order to increase his exposure to Japanese stocks. Why? Because capital always follows returns, that's an iron law.

When P2P merchants make use of Japanese wire channels, they are in fact profiting from these interest rate differentials. For example, you pay in dollars, they leverage Japan's market structure to execute an arbitrage, and then transfer the equivalent value of digital assets to your wallet.

It's like a trader walking through different markets with a bolt of cloth—buying low in one place, selling high in another, and pocketing the spread.

And you, simply by taking that path, indirectly share in the fruits of global capital flows.

You might think you're just completing a P2P exchange, but behind it lies a reflection of the entire global financial order. When Africa's energy, Japan's monetary policy, and even Buffett's investment decisions all intersect with your digital wallet, you cease to be a mere bystander in the traditional financial world—you become an active participant, even a pioneer, in the new financial era.

Why does Acumeta release trading signals based on your capital scale and membership tier?

Because scarcity creates value.

If everyone used the same signal at the same time, it would quickly lose its effectiveness. Market opportunities are like a large cake. If everyone comes with a teaspoon, each will get only a small bite. But if only a select few arrive with a knife, they can claim the largest slice.

Our membership system follows this very principle. This is not discrimination—it is professionalism.

1. It is for your safety. We will not hand you a weapon you cannot handle. We have a responsibility to ensure that you achieve high-probability wins in your currency-surfing trades.
2. It is to preserve the value of the signals. We must ensure that each signal we provide delivers maximum profit for our members.
3. It is a recognition of your investment scale. The size of your capital reflects your commitment and dedication to this endeavor. It is only natural that we provide you with top-tier resources commensurate with your level of investment.

Today, Tuesday at noon, Acumeta will release trading signals according to Quantitative Winners Legion membership tiers.

Contact my assistant now to receive your currency-surfing signal!!!

The Quantitative Winners Legion has officially begun. I have seen your actions, I have seen your commitment, and I am proud of every one of you. Many are following in our footsteps, sharing their trading experiences, and that is the very soul of this community.

What does wealth truly mean for us? Many say that money is nothing more than a string of numbers, that the balance in a bank account is just a few digits on a screen.

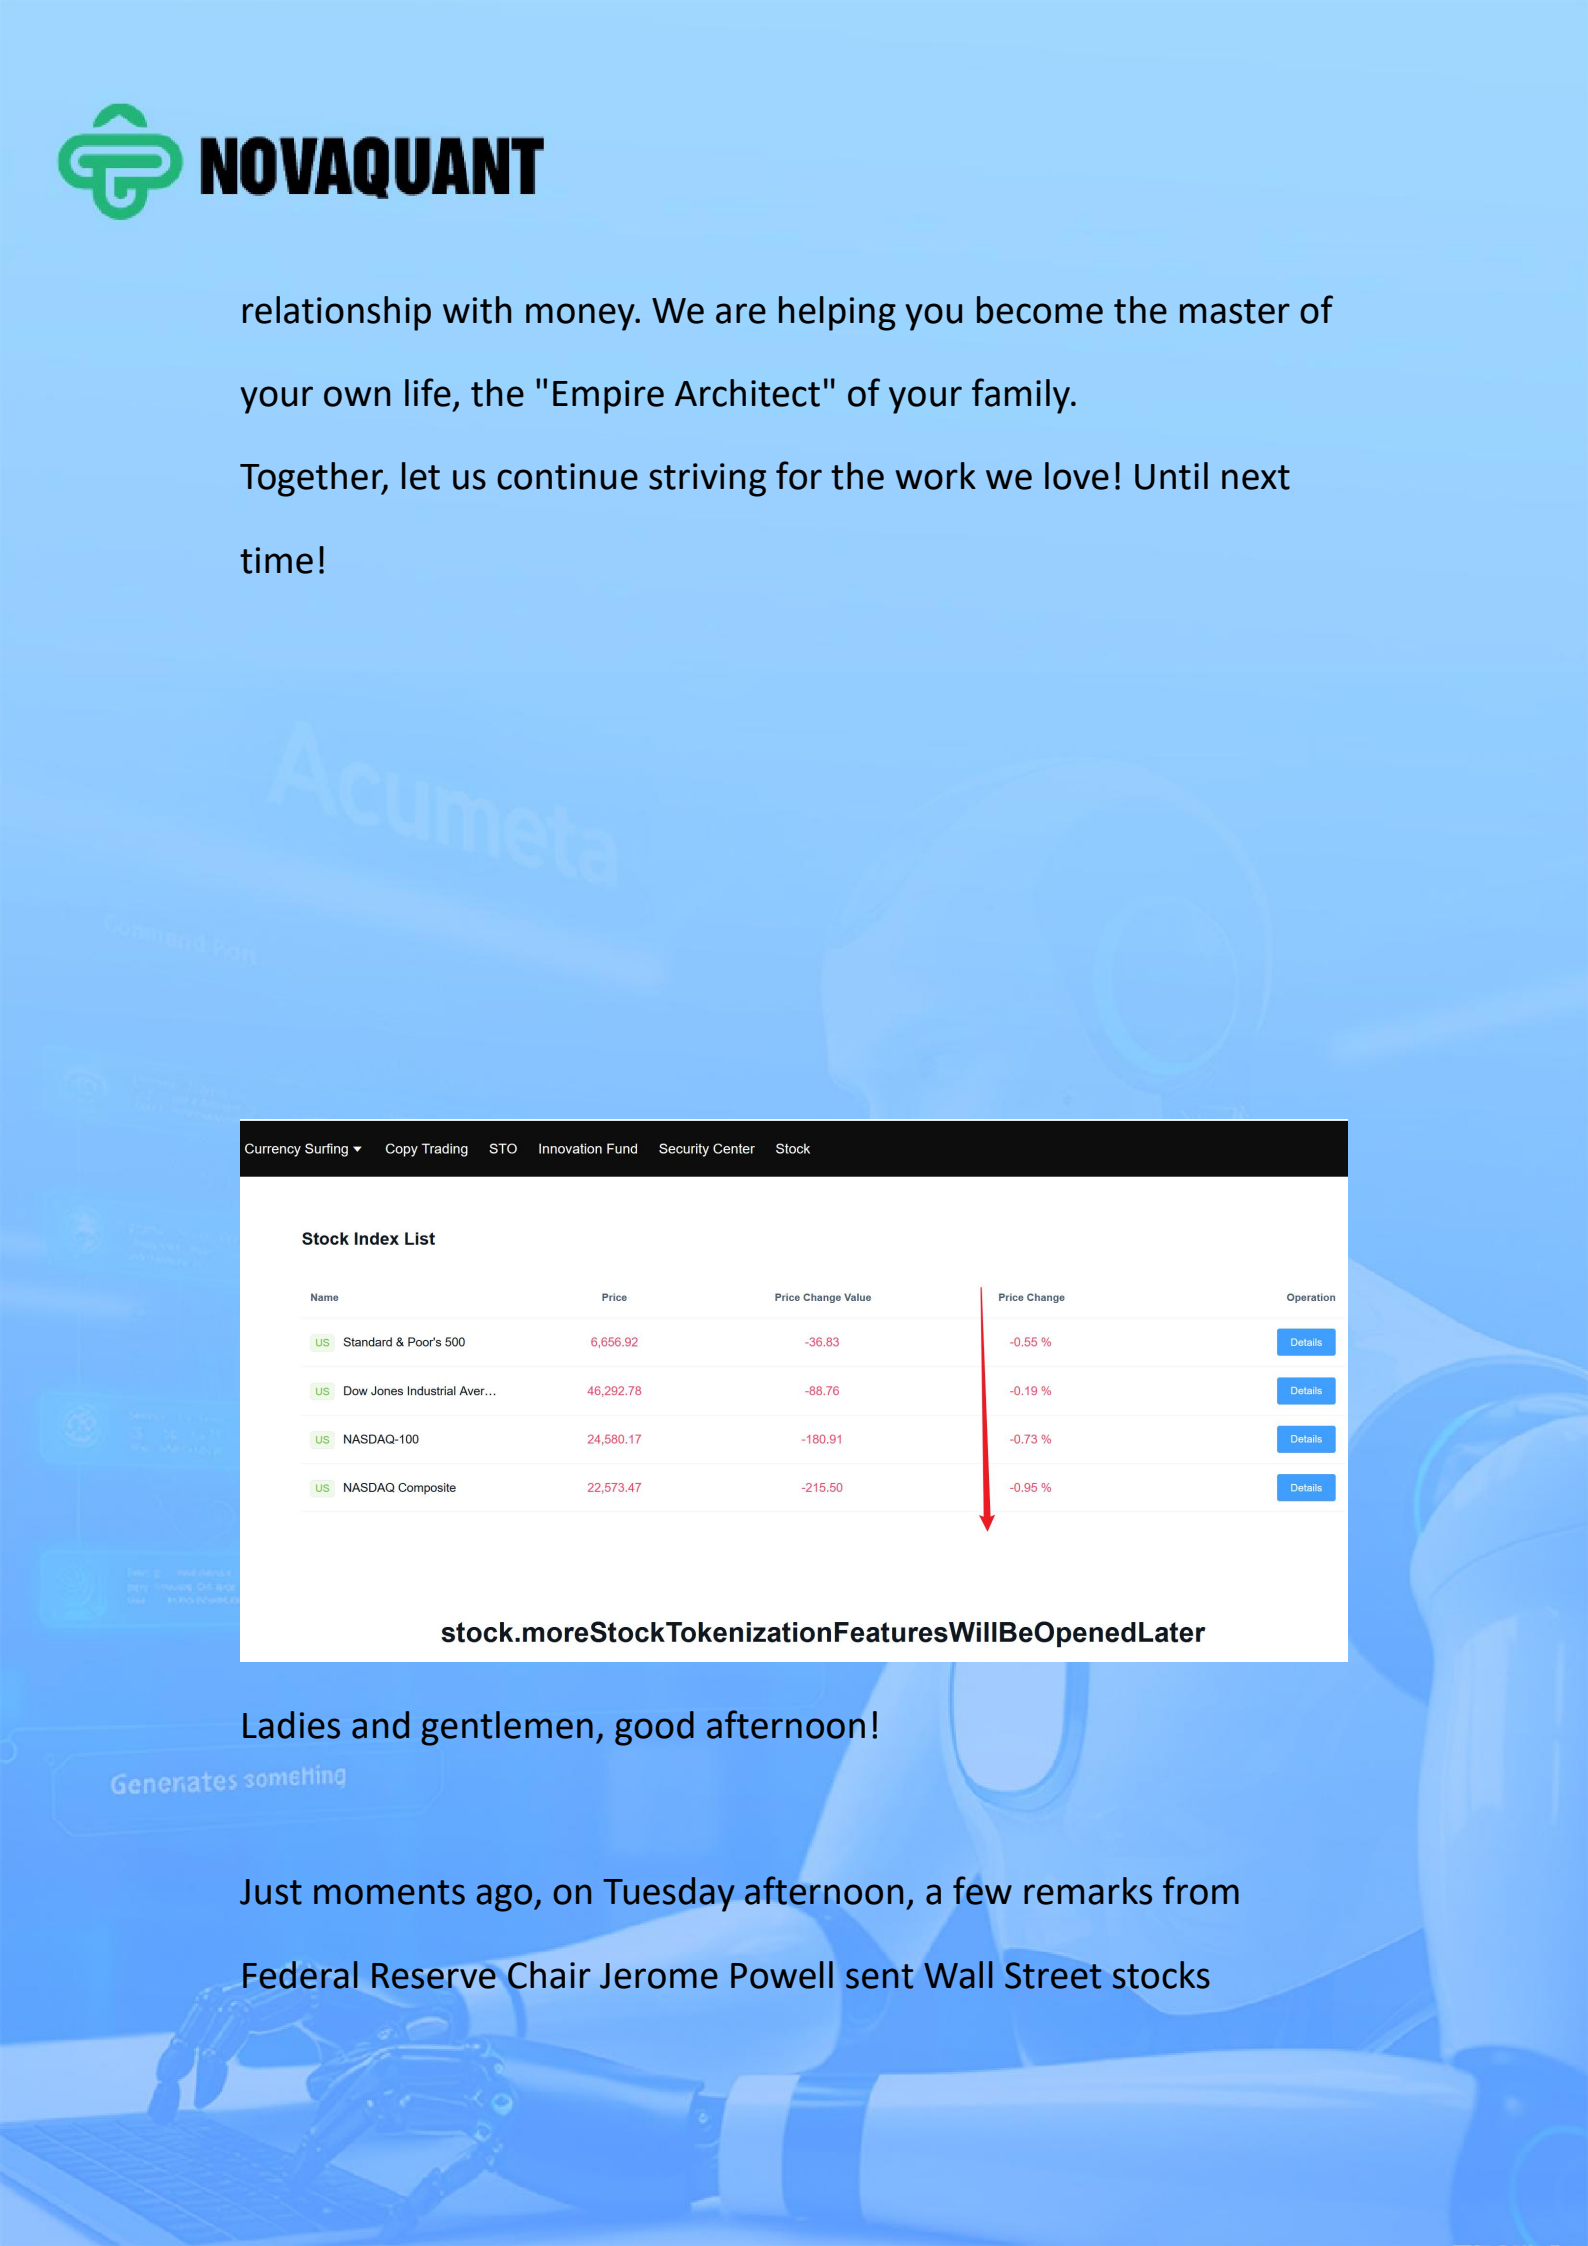

But money is not just data—it is your "social passport". It determines where you live, where your children go to school, and what kind of medical care you receive when you are ill. It determines whether you have the power of choice, whether you have the confidence to say "no"

We all know that the first generation's success often comes through sweat and relentless effort. But if the second generation lacks a solid foundation of wealth, they may be forced to start over, retracing every hardship we once endured.

What we, the [Quantitative Winners Legion], are doing is not merely helping you make money. We are helping you redefine your relationship with money. We are helping you become the master of your own life, the "Empire Architect" of your family.

Together, let us continue striving for the work we love! Until next time!

Ladies and gentlemen, good afternoon!

Just moments ago, on Tuesday afternoon, a few remarks from Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell sent Wall Street stocks tumbling—like a treadmill that suddenly lost power, dropping straight down. This wasn't just ordinary turbulence, it was a wake-up call for every investor.

Keep in mind, this was his first public address since last week's rate cut.

And what happened? On the surface, he acknowledged that there's still room for further cuts, but then, true to form, he pivoted back to his usual ambiguity. He spoke eloquently, but without revealing his hand—leaving the market both hopeful and anxious.

I often say Powell is like a poker master, always making you think he's holding strong cards, yet never letting you see them clearly. The result? A whole table of jittery players. At times like this, market sentiment becomes a rollercoaster, and whoever fastens their seatbelt first is the one who laughs last. The October rate-cut decision is still worth anticipating, but until then, this uncertainty is our trading opportunity.

For us in the [Quantitative Winners Legion], this is not misfortune—it is our stage!

When Powell's "fog" rolls in, market chaos is inevitable. Those who are unprepared will panic, lose their bearings, and blindly sell. They are like ships lost in a dense fog, with no sense of where to go.

But we are not those drifting ships. We are submarines equipped with precision radar—Acumeta. And the crypto market? This time, it has become a feast for the bears.

Bitcoin and Ethereum, the star players, looked as if they hadn't slept well, stumbling downward.

Meanwhile, the bears raised their glasses, as though celebrating their "harvest night."

Before the stock market plunged sharply on Tuesday afternoon, I had already issued alerts through our quantitative system.

While others were still hesitating about whether to lock in profits, we had already acted in advance, perfectly avoiding the risk and securing our share of the market's gains.

The crypto market often reacts in a chain-like fashion, much like a leveraged effect that has been triggered.

But unlike the stock market, in crypto we have far more freedom and virtually unrestricted tools to respond to this volatility.

First, we have powerful short-selling strategies. When markets decline, we are not passive victims of losses—we actively participate and profit from the downturn.

Second, we have a wealth of options and contract instruments. These allow us to flexibly adjust positions during volatility and effectively hedge risk.

At the higher levels of the Quantitative Winners Legion, members also gain access to intelligent managed copy-trading, where profit protection becomes even more evident! You can completely free your focus and your precious time, and fully enjoy the rhythm of life that belongs to you.

Waiting is a luxury for the weak. But for us, the Quantitative Winners Legion, we are always in action!

Generates something

Over the past two days, we have witnessed 3 groundbreaking announcements, each like a heavy hammer striking the bell of a new era.

They proclaim to us: we are at the dawn of a crypto carnival! The gates are opening—transforming from a "wild frontier" into "Wall Street's back garden."

The CFTC Acting Chair's proposal:

Just think about it, they are preparing to allow stablecoins to be used as collateral in the U.S. derivatives market.

What does this mean? It means that trillions of U.S. dollars could find a new, more efficient "home"

Stablecoins are no longer just tools of the crypto world, they are becoming the "bridge" to traditional finance.

Blue-chip crypto assets BTC/ETH entering traditional exchanges: this may be the most exciting news of all.

Bitcoin and Ethereum, these crypto assets we know so well, will soon be listed on the New York Stock Exchange and NASDAQ, just like Apple/Tesla stocks.

And what does this mean? It means that trillions of dollars in institutional capital will be able to flow into this market with far greater ease.

The SEC's "Innovation Exemption" plan for the crypto industry: This development is even more significant.

The SEC has long been regarded as the "gatekeeper" of the crypto world, and its caution has kept many companies at bay. But now, they are planning to introduce an "Innovation Exemption" for crypto firms by the end of 2025. This is like laying down a "fast track" for emerging companies.

It signals to us that regulation is becoming smarter, more flexible, and more willing to embrace innovation.

It also confirms that our chosen INDEXBIT crypto trading center, is positioned to be among the future ranks of MSB-regulated platforms, adopting secure asset disclosure obligations as its safeguard and using USDC—the most compliant option—as its unit of market transactions;

These 3 announcements are not isolated events. They are part of a carefully drawn blueprint, a roadmap charting the journey of crypto from the "fringe" to the "mainstream"

Pension funds, hedge funds, and large investment banks....giants that manage trillions of dollars, once stood at a distance from the crypto market due to regulatory and compliance barriers. But now, as the gates open, they are preparing to flood in on a massive scale.

Last month, on August 7, U.S. President Trump signed an executive order.

The first executive order is aimed at enabling ordinary Americans to invest their retirement savings in private market assets such as private equity, crypto, and private real estate—opening new opportunities for Wall Street investment firms.

The second executive order focuses on banking practices, requiring limits on banks' ability to exclude clients on the basis of so-called

"reputational risk." It directs financial institutions under the jurisdiction of the Small Business Administration (SBA) to reasonably restore services to customers who have been unlawfully denied, thereby ending what the government has described as discriminatory practices by banks against crypto transactions. Federal banks can no longer use "reputational risk" as an excuse to refuse business with legitimate enterprises (including the crypto P2P settlement industry)

If a bank tries to "block your path"—whether it involves BTC or ETH—you should act boldly and with full confidence, invoking the President's executive order to demand processing and approval of wire transfer requests related to your personal assets. You need not worry about any risk! What we are doing is fully permitted under the President's executive order!

Against the backdrop of deglobalization, the global trade dividend "cake" is shrinking. The interests of consumer countries (Europe and the U.S.), manufacturing countries (China), and resource countries (OPEC+) are no longer aligned. Coupled with the downturn in the Kondratiev cycle and growing global instability, from a "safety" perspective, the prices of assets such as gold and crypto are set to be revalued.

This is one of the key reasons why institutions continue to increase their holdings of gold + spot Bitcoin + Ethereum treasury reserves.

Paying the price for dreams—for example, the current AI industry. Once artificial intelligence is confirmed as the next industrial revolution, it will drive the global economy from a zero-sum game into an incremental growth model.

And once again, the U.S. holds a leading advantage. In my view, while industrial applications of AI have already seen explosive growth this year, Acumeta has also been presented with an unprecedented opportunity.

This is one of the main reasons I am optimistic about dividend-type assets such as digital currencies. The cycle length here can be projected to extend for over 10 years, at least until 2035.

I am also convinced that over the next decade, capital markets will inevitably focus on the long-term bull market value of crypto!

Over the past 2-3 weeks, we have discovered that the core appeal of currency surfing lies in the highly volatile digital currency contracts. Once you step into these trades, you can capture profits in an ultra-fast, short timeframe;

These profit spreads serve as rewards for those players who correctly anticipate the market's direction.

Such high-frequency market fluctuations, when left to manual trading, often carry the risk of uncertainty, emotional errors, and misguided decisions. That is why Acumeta emerged. It went through 5 years of my refinement and the hands-on training and validation of all our educational members. In the end, it has surpassed human expectations, evolving from software to hardware, and further into predictive reasoning, delivering profits beyond imagination!

We have all benefited from these rewards, and now it is time to scale up. By joining the [Quantitative Winners Legion], we can achieve even greater victories!

Charlie Munger once said a profound truth that still echoes in my ears: "At some point in my life, I decided I would become rich."

At first glance, this may sound simple, but behind it lies a meaning far deeper than money itself. It is not an empty slogan—it is a declaration of war on one's own fate, a rewriting of the script of one's life.

Today, I want to take you deeper into the essence of this statement.

From the perspective of high-net-worth Americans, let us explore what it truly means to become rich.

To be truly wealthy is to possess absolute freedom of choice over your living environment.

Imagine this: you wake up in the morning not to the shrill sound of an alarm clock, but to sunlight and birdsong. When you draw the curtains, you do not see a crowded neighborhood, but the manicured lawns of your estate, or perhaps a sweeping skyline view of the entire city.

You don't have to worry about the stress of commuting, because your office is in your own home, or in any city you choose to work from remotely.

And your home is not just a residence, it is a work of art, a fortress, a safe haven created just for you.

I have a friend named Tom. He's a multimillionaire, but he told me that what he's most grateful for is not the money itself, but the "freedom" that wealth has given him.

He said: "Brother, back when I worked in New York, I squeezed into the subway every morning, surrounded by all kinds of strange smells, I felt like an animal trapped in a cage. Now, I can work from my beachfront villa in Florida. I can go downstairs anytime to swim in the ocean or go fishing. That is what real living feels like."

For the wealthy, their environment is not about piling on luxury—it's about the relentless pursuit of quality of life.

It means you can create your ideal way of living anywhere in the world.

That is the first reason to become wealthy. And by choosing to join the [Quantitative Winners Legion], you have already gained a rare opportunity for your wealth to grow and multiply!

The differences in how America's wealthy educate their children

When it comes to children's education, the gap is like night and day.

Ordinary families worry about "whether the child can get into a good university."

Wealthy families, on the other hand, think about "how their child can become a player on the world's chessboard, not just a piece on it."

In America's elite circles, parents will take their children to Africa before the age of 12 to see wildlife, so they understand the vastness of life. By 16, they arrange for them to attend summer camps in Switzerland, to experience international ways of communication. Education is not just about textbooks—it's about cultivating vision, breadth, and character in every dimension.

I still remember a small story shared by an old Wall Street friend. When his daughter was 15, she was asked to independently design a charity fundraising event with the theme "Clean Water Resources." She not only connected with a nonprofit organization but also hosted a small concert in New York, raising tens of thousands of dollars. At that moment, she understood: "Wealth is not only for consumption—it is also responsibility." That is the kind of education ordinary schools cannot provide.

Do you want your child to be someone who has truly seen the world? Do you want to make that your motivation to strive—and your reason to decide to become wealthy?

For ordinary people, consumption is often about "owning" things—a car, a watch, a handbag. But for the wealthy, consumption is not just about ownership, it's much more about the "experience." They aren't buying luxury goods; they're buying luxurious experiences. They might charter a private jet to vacation on an island untouched by tourists. They might hire one of the world's top chefs to prepare an exquisite feast for themselves and their friends. They might acquire fine art not merely for collection, but for appreciation and enjoyment.

The wealthy don't talk about what car you bought—they ask what unique experiences your wealth has enabled you to create.

They don't ask, "Where do you live?" but rather, "Where have you been exploring lately?"

Money, at its core, is "creativity". It grants you the power to turn imagination into reality. You are no longer a passive consumer—you become an active creator of experiences.

The standard of retirement and lifestyle for the wealthy

For most people, retirement means frugality—"without income later, I'll need to be careful with every penny." But for the truly wealthy, retirement means: "I can finally take full control of the second half of my life."

I once met a retired couple in Florida. In their younger years, they were entrepreneurs who, after their success, placed their wealth into a family trust.

Now, their daily life is filled with golf, sailing, and supporting the charitable causes they love.

They don't worry about healthcare, because they have the best private medical team; they don't worry about loneliness, because their circle of friends is equally enjoying life.

For them, retirement is not about "survival"—it is about "fulfillment"

Family status: from "calling card" to "eternity"

Money is a family's "calling card", it gives your family influence and a voice in society.

A wealthy family does not prove its status through words, but through actions.

They participate in philanthropy, making real contributions to society.

They invest in emerging industries, driving technological progress.

They establish foundations to pass on their values to future generations.

So let's return to Charlie Munger's words. When he said he decided to become rich, it wasn't just a decision to acquire money.

He decided to possess freedom.

He decided to possess dignity.

He decided to possess the power of choice.

He decided to possess the ability to create a better future for his family.

This is the ultimate mission of the [Quantitative Winners Legion].

And this is the ultimate meaning of wealth— it ensures that your family does not merely "live in the present," but lives on through history.

We are not only helping you make money—we are helping you seize your destiny. For yourself. For your family. To become a true "Empire Architect".
