

Ladies and gentlemen, future on-chain winners:

As a new week begins, it's a pleasure to connect with you once again, how was your weekend? Did you enjoy those precious moments of reunion with your family? May God's love be shared equally among all good people!!!

Last Friday, we witnessed an entirely unnecessary act of "self-destruction"!

Because of Trump's aggressive remarks on U.S.–China tariffs, the market was instantly gripped by fear, triggering a sharp sell-off in both U.S. equities and the crypto space. Those without a system, retail traders, scattered like startled rabbits, fleeing and cutting their losses!

From the S&P 500 to BTC, from gold to the Nasdaq, nearly every asset fell in unison.

Some panicked, some stepped aside, but others seized that very moment to reverse their positions and calmly watch the tides turn once again.

This round of decline and rebound has been more than just another episode of market volatility, it has been a profound lesson in financial psychology.

It reminds us that emotion is the most expensive cost in any market, while diversification and hedging strategies remain the true bedrock of every winner's success.

Trump tariffs live updates: Trump says China tariffs won't stay at 145%, Bessent hints at deescalation

Let's first revisit that heart-stirring moment.

Last Friday afternoon, during a campaign speech, Trump suddenly declared: "If China refuses to renegotiate, we will consider imposing a new round of tariffs on all remaining imports."

Just a few dozen words, yet like a single matchstick, they ignited panic across the global financial markets.

Within 3 hours, the Dow Jones plunged 200 points, and BTC instantly dropped to $100k.

Global capital scattered like a flock of startled birds.

But just when everyone thought the crisis would drag on, over the weekend, Trump unexpectedly staged a "TACO reversal" —with one offhand remark:

"We remain open to constructive economic cooperation with China."

That single line sent market sentiment spinning 180 degrees.

U.S. stock futures stopped falling and began to rebound, while BTC surged 7% within 2 hours.

This is the market.

A stage of constant change, where there are no eternal friends or enemies.

And the role you and I must play is not that of spectators led by emotion, but of conductors, those who understand rhythm and master the logic of diversification.

The market has always been an amplifier of emotion, not a machine of logic.

This truth is especially evident in the current environment.

What we're witnessing isn't the movement of data itself, but the endless oscillation between fear and hope.

Every statement, every tweet from Trump is part of a psychological game.

But the real winners are not those who try to predict his next words, they're the ones who know how to stay balanced amid the changes.

Stability means this:

when others are fearful, you can diversify and position yourself;

when others are greedy, you can stay calm and lock in profits.

From an equity perspective, I've repeatedly reminded you to take profits on your winning stocks and to temporarily step back or reduce your stock trading exposure.

So if you followed those quantitative strategy decisions last Friday—you're one of the fortunate ones!

Many people think diversification is about "safety", but true experts understand that its essence lies in "structural return rebalancing."

What does that mean? For example, when Trump stirs up a tariff storm, capital tends to flee the stock market and flow into U.S.

Treasuries and the dollar.

As the dollar strengthens and Treasuries rise, the liquidity within the crypto market simultaneously undergoes a process of repricing.

If, at that moment, you've already established a hedged, diversified structure —with part of your capital in spot holdings (such as BTC or ETH), another portion in short contracts, and the rest in stablecoins like USDC to lock in new token subscription returns —you not only avoid losses but can continue to earn steadily even in a market downturn.

That is the power of structured diversification: it doesn't ask you to predict the future, it ensures you can stand firm no matter what the outcome may be.

Generates something

This "Trump episode" is, in fact, a mirror. One that reflects each of our "psychological resilience" in investing.

Have you found yourself panicking amid volatility?

Have you let short-term fear cost you your long-term positioning?

Have you given up on an entire cycle because of a single downturn?

This is not a political incident, it's a test of cognitive evolution.

And now, what we're seeing is not the end, but the prelude to a great "reshuffling"

Following Trump's "TACO reversal," short-term market confidence has recovered, and capital is beginning to flow back into crypto assets.

Particularly into projects pegged to the U.S. dollar, new token subscription programs with stable yield structures, major assets like BTC/ETH, AI-themed tokens, and platform coins, have once again come under the focus of major capital.

If you're wise enough, you should know this:
when the market's decline is only a disguise for a deeper shakeout, the real capital positioning has already begun.

This is why we emphasize "advantageous position management"
An advantageous position isn't the one that earns you the most, it's the one that allows you to endure when conditions are at their worst.

In the world of risk management, survival will always matter more than windfall gains.

The return of TACO trading serves as the "victory call" after this market storm.

It represents a new entry point for liquidity, a new subscription model, and a new amplifier of wealth.

If you grasp this, you'll understand —we now stand at the intersection of policy, market, and sentiment— a triple inflection point.

Opportunities like this come, on average, only once every 5 years.

Trump’ s remarks are but a passing wind;
the real trend lies in the logic of capital flow.

The so-called [1011 epic] volatility is merely the market’ s pause for breath, and the next surge often begins in the very moment when doubt runs deepest.

Action is the only passport through volatility.

This is the faith of our Quantitative Winners Legion.
Let us ride October’ s tide once more,
and seize our own crest of victory.

Today is Columbus Day —a day that symbolizes "courage, exploration, and discovery"

Each year on this day, I remind myself of one simple truth: throughout history, true victories were never won by those who already knew the "answers", but by those who dared to set sail — who had the courage to leave the familiar harbor and venture into the unknown sea.

When Columbus embarked on his voyage, he had no GPS, no satellite navigation, he wasn't even certain that a "New World" existed.

But he had one thing: conviction.

He believed that the edge of the world was not an end, but a turning point.

He believed that beyond every storm lies another continent waiting to be found.

And today, as we stand on the course of the Q4 crypto era, are we not precisely such a generation of "digital Columbuses"?

Last Friday, a single tough statement from Trump on tariffs swept through the markets like a sudden gale, pulling both U.S. stocks and the crypto space into a vortex of decline.

And just a day later, his "TACO reversal" remarks sent the markets rebounding in an instant, as if the wind at sea had suddenly shifted 180 degrees.

In such turbulence, many choose to retreat to the harbor —to wait and see, to stay still.

But what would Columbus have done?

He wouldn't stand still waiting for the storm to pass.

He would change his sails, adjust his course, and use the power of the storm to propel himself forward.

That is the spirit we must learn today:

market volatility is not a risk, it is the wind that propels you forward.

The real risk lies in not knowing how to harness its direction.

The U.S. federal government has now entered its 3rd week of shutdown.

A void in data, delayed economic indicators, and unfocused market analysis —a landscape shrouded in fog.

But the smart money has already begun to move:

taking advantage of this data vacuum to position ahead of the Fed's expected rate cut window at the end of October.

This week, Fed officials will deliver their final round of public remarks before entering next week's pre-rate-cut blackout period.

And each statement could ignite a new "spark" of market volatility.

It means turbulence is coming.

It means the "crest of the next wave" is already forming.

We are not waiting for the wave, we are creating it, foreseeing it, and seizing it

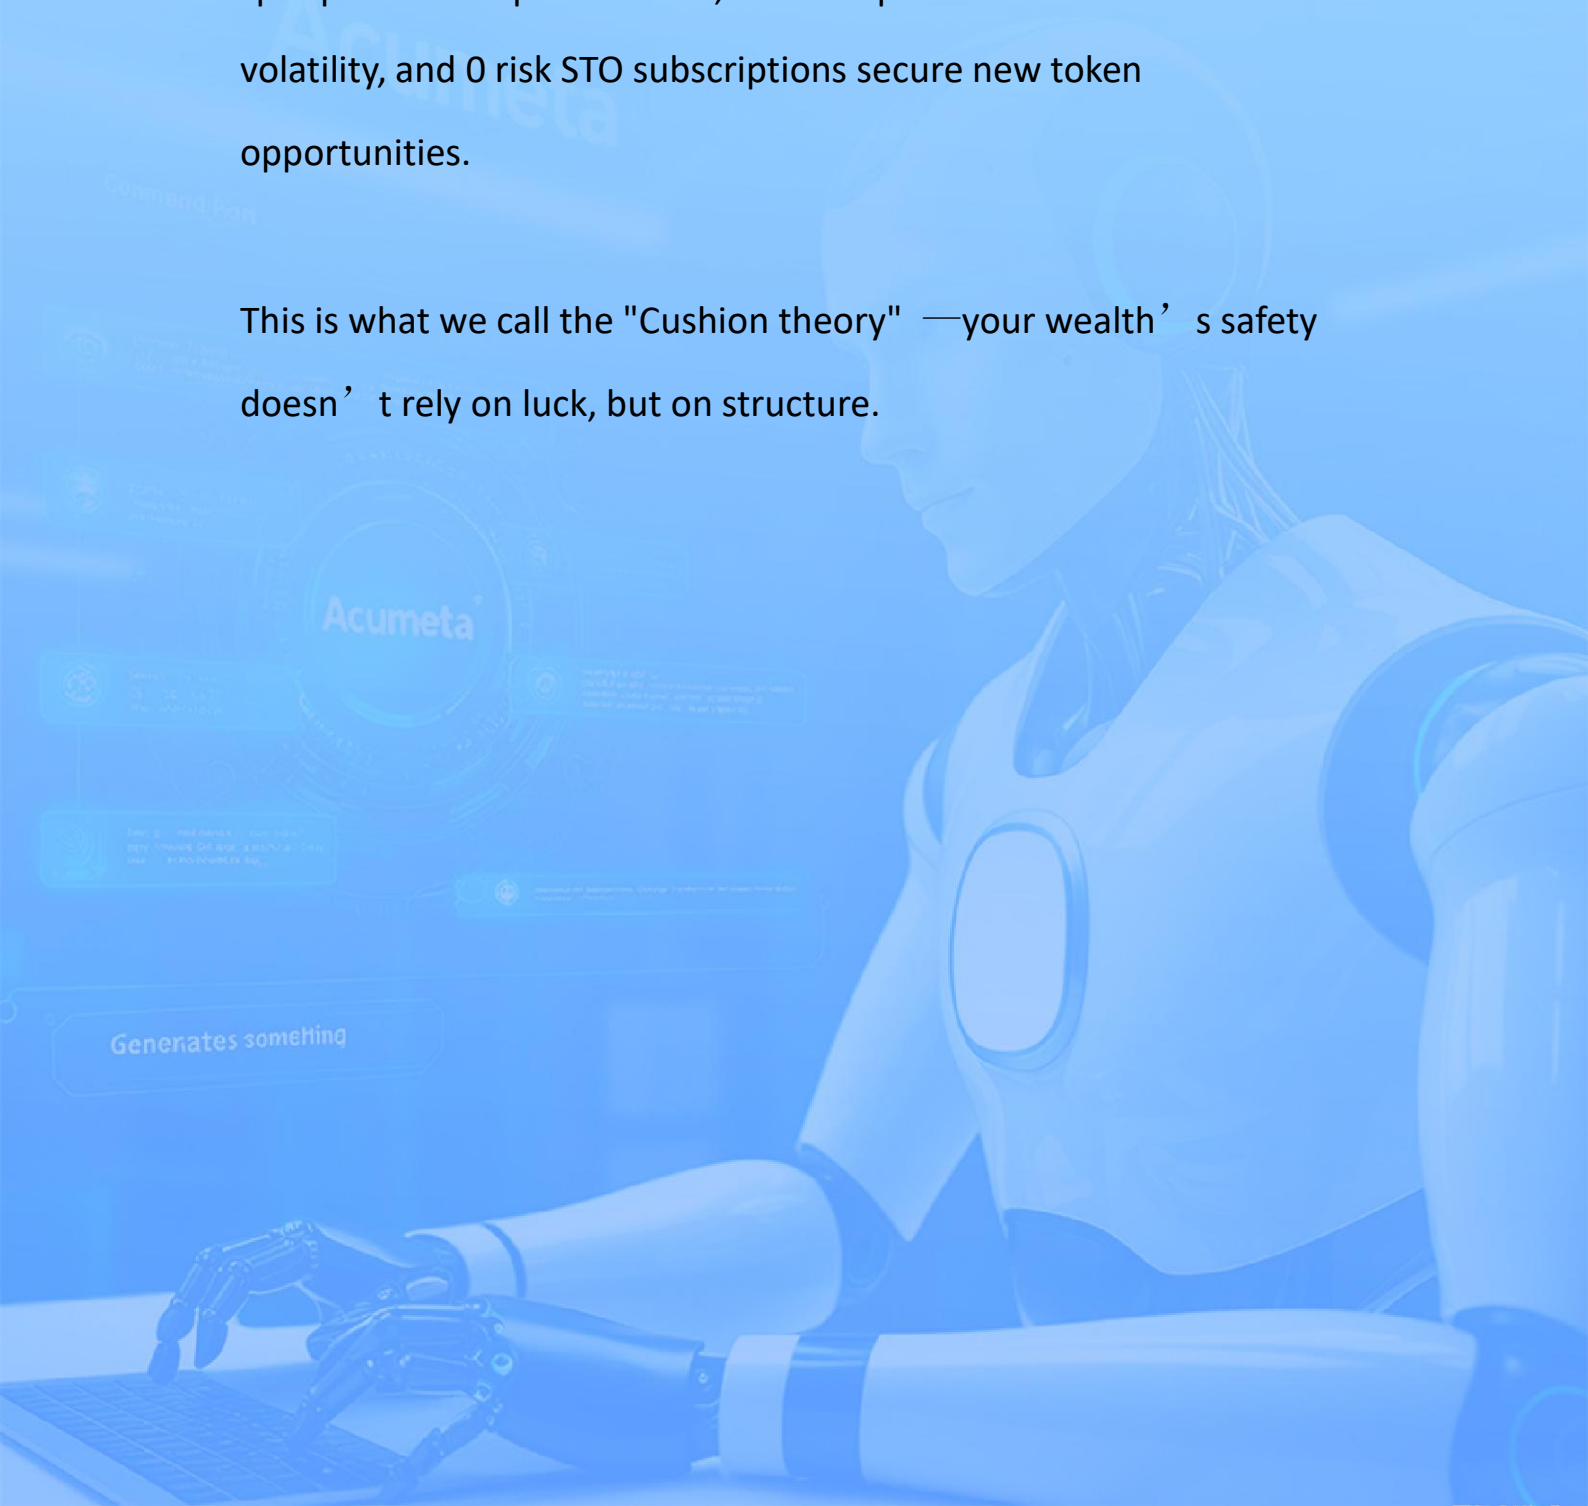

Prepare sufficient stablecoins in advance for ASYN' s upcoming token subscription.

Never place all your hopes in a single direction.

In quantitative investing, this is the "philosophy of diversification": spot positions capture trends, contract positions seize short-term volatility, and 0 risk STO subscriptions secure new token opportunities.

This is what we call the "Cushion theory" —your wealth' s safety doesn' t rely on luck, but on structure.

Market sentiment swings are often the greatest source of profit.

When fear takes over, token prices are undervalued;
when euphoria dominates, risks are ignored.

The quantitative system leverages this "human volatility" — capturing the clearest logical signals amid the most chaotic emotional swings.

Generates something

Now we see the overlap between ASYN' s subscription window and the TACO trading boom, creating what will likely become a textbook example of a

"compound return cycle."

Market momentum, capital migration, and policy expectations are now moving in resonance.

The story of Columbus reminds us that sailing was never about escaping the land, it was about making the world larger.

Investing is the same: we do not let a single victory or mistake be swayed by emotion; we do it to embrace greater possibilities.

On this Columbus Day, each of us as quantitative winners should ask ourselves one question:

Am I retreating in fear, or growing through exploration?

Pals, this week marks both the "Week of New World Discovery" and the "starting point of Q4 profitability"

On this day that symbolizes courage and discovery, let us redefine our spirit of investment:

Do not be a passenger drifting with the current, be the captain who steers through the waves.

Don't be swayed by the market, set your own course in advance.

Do not fret over short-term volatility, earn respect through long-term logic.

The ASYN new token subscription campaign is about to begin, and every successful currency surfing trade this week carries special significance —because together, we can build the absolute strength of a true top-tier subscriber!!

This afternoon, we'll continue exploring how to leverage currency surfing profits to elevate our edge in the ASYN new token subscription!

To all true capital hunters of the Quantitative Winners Legion:

Feel the surge of excitement bursting through the markets!

This Monday afternoon's rally is nothing short of a textbook masterpiece!

The market this afternoon is blazing —hotter than the California sun.

Just moments ago, Federal Reserve officials released a statement hinting that —by the end of this year, they may implement 2 consecutive rate cuts.

The market reacted like a reawakened beast, bullish sentiment in the crypto space reignited instantly.

BTC, like molten lava, erupted from its consolidation base.

This is no coincidence, this is a signal.

And I know,

none of you here are mere spectators watching from the sidelines.

We are the riders of the tide —the surfers who know precisely when to paddle in and when to pull back in the vast ocean of global capital.

Just this noon, we completed a perfect round of currency surfing.

It was a kind of thrill — not from price swings, but from a resonance with the market’ s rhythm.

While others hesitated or feared to act, we had already positioned ahead of time.

And when the Fed’ s expectations became reality, we were already locking in profits.

Buddy, this may well be your best blessing on a Monday.

It wasn't just a profitable journey, it was a victory of confidence and judgment.

We are now living through one of the rarest economic turning points in history:

the Fed's policy is easing, inflationary pressures are fading, and institutional capital is flowing back into risk assets.

What does that mean?

It means money is once again searching for speed.

It means smart capital no longer sits idle in bank accounts—it's in motion, in play, surfing the tides of currency.

That's why "currency surfing" is more than just a trading strategy, it's a mindset—an ability to understand rhythm, anticipate trends, and execute decisions.

When others are still waiting for confirmation, we are acting on foresight.

When others are still analyzing the past, we are building the future.

This has given rise to a "Trump-style trading sentiment" — a distinctly American response: rate cuts = more cash flow = stronger risk appetite = an excuse for market euphoria. You've seen this before — in 2019, again in 2020 — and every time, it marked the start of a new wave of wealth redistribution.

So, how do we win Q4 more decisively?

First, understand the macro — know where the wind is blowing.

Second, execute the Acumeta strategy — know when to act.

Third, cultivate the right mindset — dare to surf the currency waves, and upgrade your membership tier to unlock greater rights and benefits.

It's now Q4, the opening chapter of the entire rate-cutting cycle.

Capital flows across the market are about to be reshuffled:

the rise of risk assets will drive liquidity back on-chain;

expectations for new token subscription projects will reignite;

and Acumeta-powered quantitative trading will emerge as the engine of the new wave of wealth distribution.

This isn't a prediction, it's the echo of history.

From the dollar's decoupling from gold in the 1970s to the quantitative easing of 2008, behind every round of monetary expansion, there has always been a group of people who gained their freedom riding the crest of the wave.

And the dollar's devaluation was made evident through the price of gold —the answer lies in the post – World War II declaration: one ounce of gold for $35.

This is not merely a story about currency, it's a story about trust, about eras, and about who holds the anchor of wealth.

Many understand the power of the U.S. dollar, but few realize that its "strength" has, from the very beginning, been a carefully crafted "experiment in trust."

Generates something
An experiment that began at the Bretton Woods Conference in the aftermath of World War II.

It was 1944, and the world, ravaged by war, lay in ruins.

The United States held more than two-thirds of the world's gold reserves.

So America proposed a rule that seemed simple, yet would change the world forever:

—"Let the U.S. dollar serve as the world's settlement center, backed by gold."

In short: 1 ounce of gold = 35 dollars.

This meant that any country holding U.S. dollars could exchange them in the United States for real gold.

As a result, the world accepted the dollar with confidence.

The dollar became the "hard currency" of international trade, and the "invisible scepter" through which the United States governed the global economic order.

By the 1960s, however, America's war expenses and domestic spending had soared.

The Vietnam War, the moon landing program, and domestic welfare — the money simply couldn't keep up.

The U.S. began printing dollars at an unprecedented pace. The problem was clear: the gold reserves stayed the same, but the volume of dollars in circulation was exploding.

And so the world began to doubt — did 35 dollars still truly equal one ounce of gold?

On August 15, 1971, a single decision changed the course of human monetary history.

U.S. President Richard Nixon announced that the dollar would be decoupled from gold.

From that moment on, the dollar no longer needed gold to back its value.

In other words, the United States could print money without restraint.

This wasn't a conspiracy, it was a historical fact. From that day forward, the dollar became a symbol sustained purely by "trust" Gold, for humanity, has always represented faith in scarcity and enduring value.

It cannot be printed, copied, or altered.

But —it carries one fatal flaw: inconvenience. Gold is heavy, difficult to transport, and even harder to circulate.

You can't exactly walk into a Starbucks with a gold bar to buy a cup of coffee, can you?

And so, in the digital age of the 21st century, we began to ask: could there be an asset as scarce as gold, yet as fluid and widely circulated as the dollar?

And so, in 2008, in the darkest night of the financial crisis, a man named Satoshi Nakamoto released a paper that would become a new financial manifesto.

When BTC emerged, the world was in the midst of a dollar crisis. Lehman Brothers had collapsed, and the Fed was printing money at an unprecedented pace.

For the first time, people began to realize that what we called "wealth" might simply be a string of digits — infinitely reproducible at will.

BTC was designed on the opposite logic: 21 million coins, never to be increased.

This meant it is the gold of the digital world —a "decentralized system of trust."

No government could control it, and no central bank could alter its supply.

BTC became trust, written in code.

Gold is the symbol of an older generation's faith in wealth.

BTC is the continuation of that faith, the evolution of trust in the digital age.

This is not a sign of disrespect toward gold, but an evolution of humanity' s system of trust.

The price of gold soared from $35 an ounce to $4100.

Because people came to realize — "money" can be printed, but "gold" cannot.

Today, in the 21st century, we find ourselves witnessing the same pattern once again:

as the total supply of U.S. dollars surpasses all historical highs and the Fed launches round after round of "quantitative easing", smart capital is once again searching for a new safe haven.

Gold? Well, it remains reliable.

But in the blockchain era, Bitcoin is more agile, more global, and far more accessible. Trust is the foundation of all currency.

Whoever can provide stable, transparent, and verifiable trust will define the future order of wealth.

BTC is not an act of rebellion, it is the natural evolution of money.

It has no physical form, no tangible shape, yet hundreds of millions around the world believe in its scarcity, liquidity, and verifiability.

This is the new "digital consensus." So, the current $115K BTC price is not the destination, it is merely the beginning.

The future $300K, $500K, even $1000K are milestones we are destined to witness!

If the U.S. dollar was the most successful "symbol of trust" in human history, then BTC is the "trust rebuilder" of the new century.

Gold taught us: wealth requires scarcity.

The dollar taught us: wealth requires liquidity.

And BTC teaches us: wealth also requires decentralized security.

Bitcoin is not here to replace the dollar or gold, it offers humanity a 3rd choice:

a free currency, independent of politics and immune to inflation.

It doesn't sit in vaults, but in the wallets of individuals.

It isn't money granted by a nation, but an asset recognized through global consensus.

This —is the power of digital gold.

This —is the prelude to a new monetary order.

As members of my Quantitative Winners Legion, we' ve discovered the true meaning of life, and that's to create ever more miracles of wealth, embodying the same spirit as Columbus when he discovered the New World: the courage to open new horizons and unlock infinite possibilities for a greater world!

Looking back on the past week, much of the success achieved by our higher-tier Legion members, and the explosive profits earned by our shareholder members, all came from currency surfing diversified trades powered by super signals.

These mid- to short-term trades are becoming a new method of profit stacking, because in last week's intense wave of volatility, they perfectly embodied the true spirit of the blockchain revolution, and that's the very essence of wealth itself.

And beyond that, our advantageous-position shareholder members secured multiple on-chain profits through diversified asset allocations. This is the reward of action, and the finest return granted by God.

Take a moment to reflect, whether it was BTC at 115K or ETH at 4200, which crucial decisions did you let slip by?

What are we fighting for this week?

To be precise, we're preparing for next week's launch of the new ASYN token subscription!

Because based on our past experience with new token subscriptions, one key insight stands out from analyzing the distribution outcomes: the principle of time priority is one of the most important rules of all!

And if you can combine time priority + large-scale subscription priority, you can unlock the highest level of reward!

This is the key subscription plan for true winners —one built on understanding the rules and executing strategy with precision.

This week, my hope is simple:

each $1000 member can earn $10k in profit;

each $100k member, $1 million in profit;

and each $1 million member, $10 million in profit.

All of these gains, I hope, will be achieved through the super returns of currency surfing!

Only with such an advantageous subscription position can you secure the most favorable allocation outcome!

How can these profits be achieved?

It all comes down to actively increasing the frequency of your currency surfing trades, that is the key to victory.

And higher trading frequency requires a higher Quantitative Winners Legion tier, which comes with its own exclusive rewards and privileges.

That's why it's essential to keep upgrading to unlock these premium benefits and privileges.

Just imagine, with $100k in capital, each time you allocate $20k to a currency surfing trade, and if you have access to Super Signal privileges, those signals could help you earn 300% returns per trade, that's $60k in profit.

In other words, you could build wealth faster than ever in an incredibly short time!

The urgency you feel now is not without reason —it’ s about preparing your capital before the ASYN new token subscription officially begins.

Every preparation you make now serves one goal: to achieve a true ALL IN victory in this project’ s wealth cycle!

From "thrill trading” to "epic projects":

the ultimate verdict in on-chain wealth—project investment outweighs trading!

We’ ve just experienced the exhilarating rush of currency surfing!

We captured every verbal cue from Fed officials, and within the wave of TACO trading sentiment, we achieved a single-session 300% super gain!

That’ s incredible! We’ ve just proven the true power of our Acumeta system!

But now, I need you to shift your mindset from that of a "trader" to that of an "investor"

Because today's discussion is about one thing, whether you can evolve from a "skilled" trader into a "legendary" creator of wealth. Investing in a 0 risk new token subscription project carries far greater importance than any single trading victory in currency surfing!

Going ALL IN on a major project success outweighs the pursuit of repeated short-term trades driven by probability!

Every currency surfing trade, no matter how precise our system, still involves "probability"

Even with a 90% win rate, that remaining 10% chance of error, repeated over a 100 trades, can still deal a heavy emotional blow!

But investing in a 0 risk new token subscription project, such as next week's ASYN launch, is different!

It offers an anchor of "certainty"! That's the "antidote" to probability risk!

Why is a 0 risk new token project more powerful than a single victory in currency surfing?

When a "new token subscription project" features a 0 risk structure, a lock-up mechanism, and a clear token economic model, it doesn't represent a short-term arbitrage opportunity, it's an early entry ticket to the birth of the next financial trust system.

First, the dimension of time is different.

Trading is a short-term game; a project is long-term compounding.

Short-term success comes from volatility, while long-term success is built on structure.

Second, the compounding of energy is different.

A winning trade gives you short-term profit;

a winning project gives you a lasting asset — one that draws in more capital and resonates with a wider community.

Third, the sense of fulfillment is different.

The joy of trading is saying, "I beat the market."

The joy of a project is saying, "I helped create part of the world."

The former is a game, the latter is creation.

That is the true allure of being an on-chain wealth winner.

Many go ALL IN on emotion, on short-term moves, on fleeting impulses.

Our version of ALL IN is different, it's in a 0 risk, "high-certainty" new token subscription project.

When we're presented with a 0 risk new token subscription project, our role is not merely to "take part", but to "understand"—understand why it's secure, why it's scarce, and why it will grow. In my Tuesday program, I'll deliver a full deep-dive into the intrinsic value of the new token ASYN, mark your calendar and stay tuned!

You must remember, a secure project doesn't mean it's free from volatility, it means its logic stands unshaken.

In the age of AI, the scarcest form of capital is no longer money, but "certainty"

And the projects that can offer certainty ultimately attract the money. Because projects represent direction, while trades reflect emotion.

If you've already profited multiple times through currency surfing, congratulations —you’ ve mastered rhythm.

But if you aspire to true freedom, you need a shift in perspective:
from riding the wave to creating the wave.

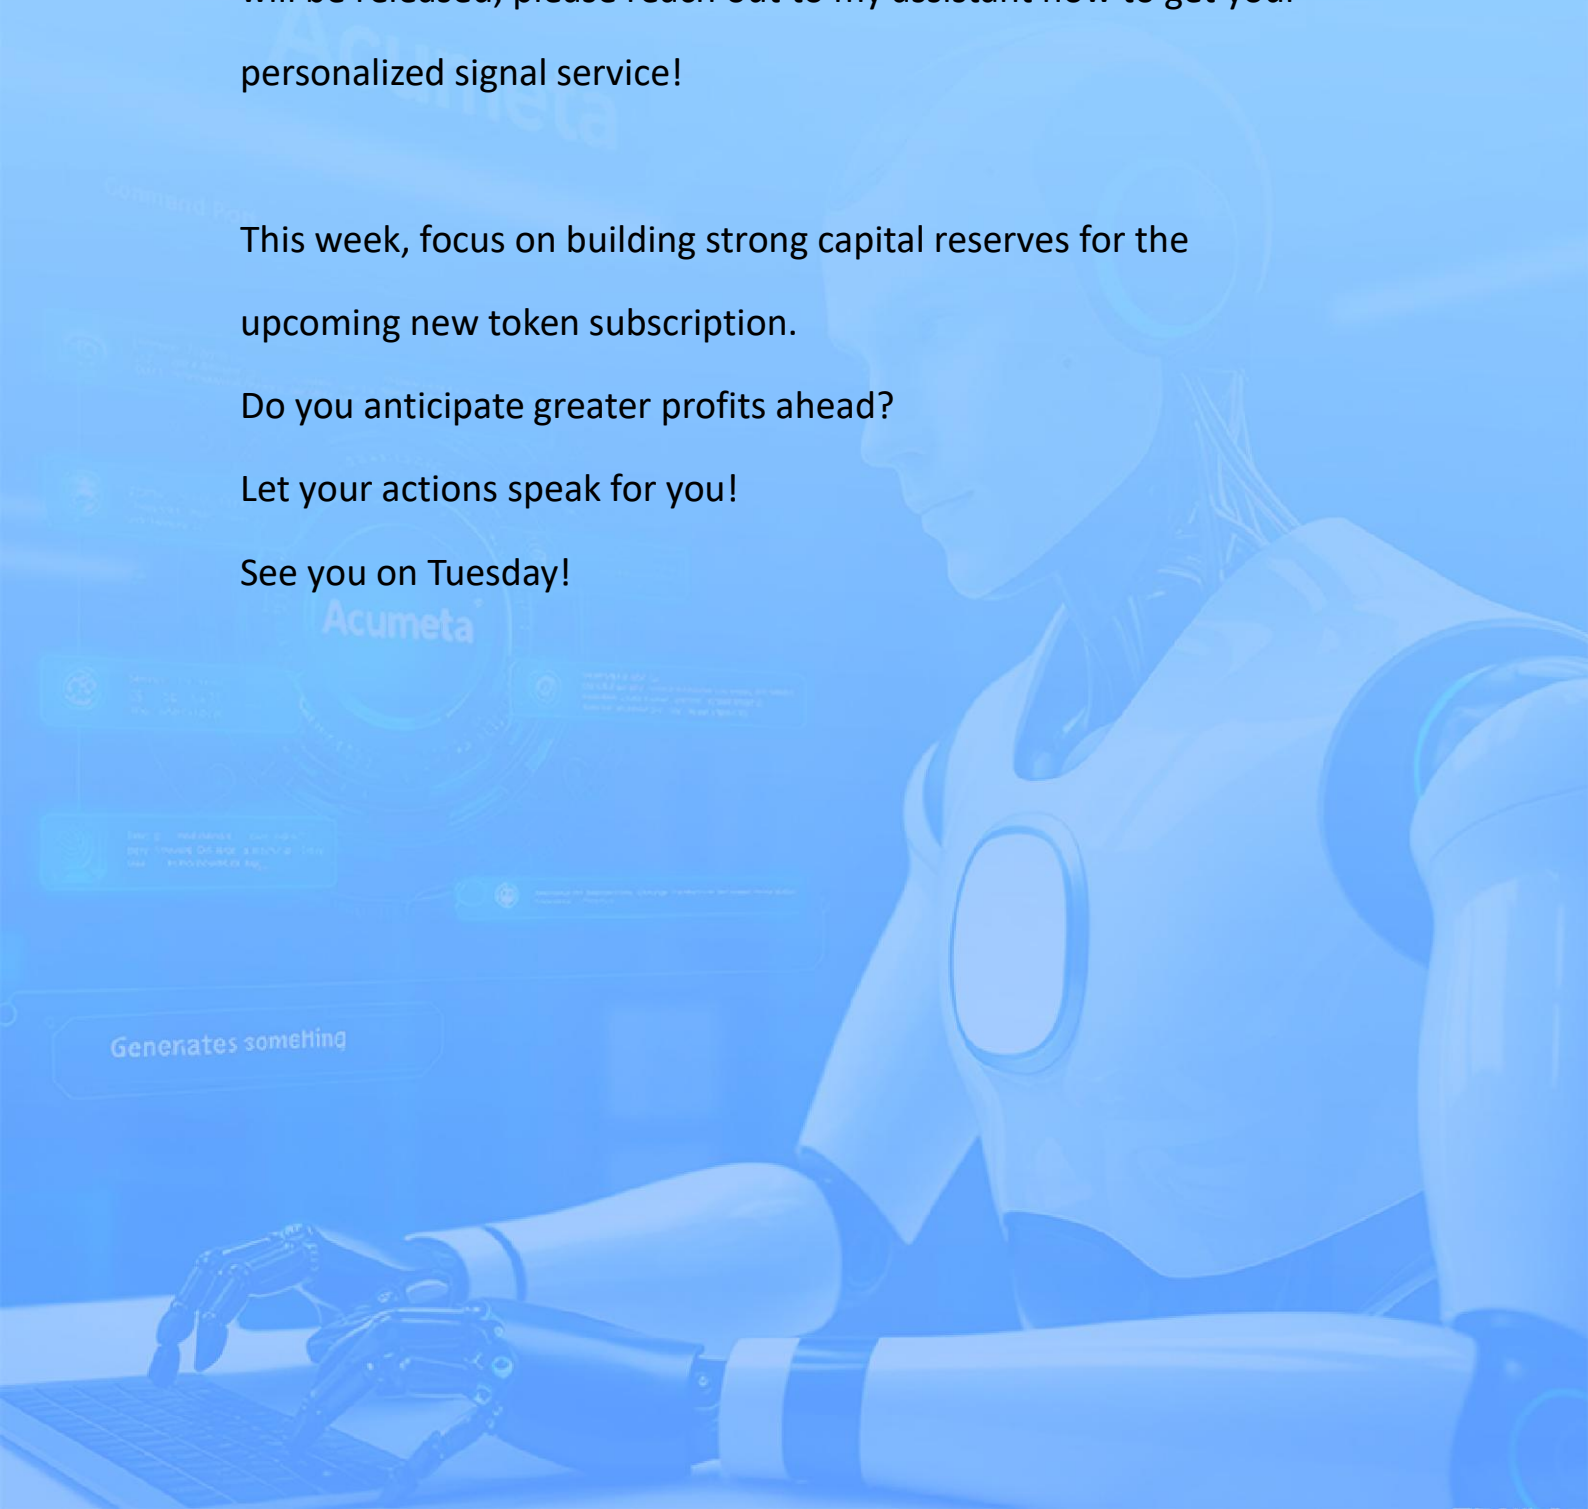

On Monday evening, an exciting super-profit currency surfing signal will be released, please reach out to my assistant now to get your personalized signal service!

This week, focus on building strong capital reserves for the upcoming new token subscription.

Do you anticipate greater profits ahead?
